AT SEA

TONIGHT'S ATTIRE: CASUAL

CROSSING THE EQUATOR

Today we will be crossing the equator at the prime meridian, also known as "Null Island." This imaginary island is located at 0°N 0°E (hence "Null") in the South Atlantic Ocean. This point is where the equator meets the prime meridian. While there isn't an island, we will be sailing past an Ocean Data Acquisition System Weather Buoy known as "Soul," permanently anchored at 0°N 0°E.

KING NEPTUNE CEREMONY

Hear Ye, Hear Ye new sea dogs and old time mariners, whichever you may be. Know ye that on this 0 in latitude and 0 in longitude thou shalt appear at the limits of my august dwelling of the Golden X in the World midway between the North and the South poles where the Equator crosses the Prime Meridian. We have discovered that thou hast pollywogs on board amongst thy crew who haven't been initiated, the ritual will be held this morn at 1000 hrs. Join us to witness their initiation to Emerald Shellbacks where they will receive the rigors of testing for their acceptable seaworthiness.

King Neptune the First, and the Mrs.
